George Stark is a Principal Scientist with the MITRE Corporation in Colorado Springs. He was responsible for developing the software measurement program for the NASA Johnson Space Center Mission Operations Directorate and for the Missile Warning and Space Surveillance Sensors Program Management Office of AFMC/SSSG. George has published more than 40 papers on software measurement and received the Johnson Space Center Quality Partnership award in 1991 and the MITRE General Manager's Award in 1993 for contributions to software measurement. He received his Bachleor's Degree in Statistics from Colorado State University and his Master's Degree in Mathematics from the University of Houston.