Bradford Clark works as a Technical Consultant in Software Measurement and is a Research Associate at the Center for Software Engineering at the University of Southern California. He is a principle author of the COCOMO II model and performed the initial calibrations on the model. Dr. Clark recently left his job in promoting and assisting Software Process Improvement at a U.S. Government facility in China Lake, California. He has participated in and led software technology demonstration projects and, earlier in his career, he was a Navy pilot. He received his B.S. in Computer and Information Science from the University of Florida (1978), an M.S. degree in Software Engineering from USC (1995), and a Ph.D. in Computer Science from USC (1997).
